

JUDY AND JIMMIE

This country-rock ballad is about a couple you find in every bar. An old couple that has been together forever. They live in a world of their own, clinging to each other and dancing to the last song of the night. They close down the bar, stagger out, and one day they just disappear. Their life has a story like everyone else. But theirs has played out, and nobody seems to care.

“He drinks only whiskey, she drinks only wine
She never stops her bitchin’, he stays drunk all the time
They’re quite a pair and I swear, they don’t stand a chance
But every night at closing time they have the last dance
His eyes roll back in his head, her head lay on his shoulder
And they slow dance to the last song of the night
Then they stumble out of the bar, and everything seems fine
They go home and he drinks whiskey, she drinks only wine”
